

Piacenza (Italy).

From 5 to 7 March 2021 Piacenza Expo, the main appointment for European beekeeping, returns to Piacenza Expo in the pavilions of the exhibition centre.

Two exhibition halls dedicated to equipment, technologies and services for the production of honey and honey derivatives.

The event has managed over the years to carve out an authoritative space as an international appointment where the most topical issues are dealt with and deepened in a series of conferences and seminars. Participating in APIMELL means to enrich oneself with professional updates and relationships with market operators.

The beekeeping sector is fundamental for agriculture and biodiversity in general, so the increase in European funding from 120 to 180 million euros for the next three-year beekeeping programmes is a strong and positive sign.

All the more reason to visit Apimell and the extensive catalogue of equipment, products and services available to European beekeepers.

Apimell 2021 will see the presence of the most prestigious brands in the sector that will offer the latest news for beekeepers: innovation, quality of materials, and eco-sustainability are the key words of the exhibition offer. An opportunity for professionals to adapt their structures to the latest innovations that allow cost savings and better management of the hive. The exhibition showcase will then be completed with hive products for cosmetic, food and curative uses.

APIMELL takes place as usual at the same time as Seminat - 39th market exhibition of ornamental plants, floriculture, seeds and gardening and Buon Vivere, the exhibition dedicated to typical and quality food and wine products from all over Italy.
